Advice

A private let is often the quickest way to find a new home. To increase your chances, use the following methods:

Finding a private let - online

Landlords and agents advertise properties online using a variety of websites. Here are some of the most popular sites:

- Rightmove;
- Zoopla;
- Find a Flat;
- Gumtree;
- SpareRoom.

Finding a private let - letting agencies

Yell.com will have information about local letting agencies. The Ethical Lettings Agency is a locally based letting agency that specialises in helping low-income families to access the private rented sector. Call them on 01824 456 888.

Finding a private let - local newspapers/magazines

Most local newspapers and magazines will have a section with advertisements for rented accommodation and flat shares. The Epic Forest Journal is published every Thursday. They usually have adverts from private landlords in the classified section.

“It's giving me the information that I actually want as opposed to irrelevant information and shows me the thing of value”

Customer of Lewisham Council

“It is important that our Housing Options website provides really useful guidance and advice. AdviceAid helps us deliver interactive self-help, 24/7; as well as the flexibility that we can localise the information.”

Richard Fowler - North Devon Council

“FutureGov is excited to see new tech solutions like AdviceAid being developed by individuals with service delivery experience. We need better tools to meet the needs of service delivery staff and their customers, where the traditional market is expensive and often failing them.”
